

Risk Statement.

Margin trading involves a high level of risk and it makes the potential gain or loss quite high. Trading margin products allows you to take a larger position than you would otherwise be able to based on your available funds. Also note a small price movement in the underlying instrument can have a significant effect on your exposure.. If your total exposure on margin trades exceeds your deposit, you may go into a margin call situation and you will be required to either deposit more funds or reduce your positions, even if your positions are in a loss situation. When you trade margin products you risk losing more than your deposit. Please also note that for margin trades, the providers have the right to amend the margin requirements at any time.
